Background

Progress on gender equality and women's empowerment remains uneven across the region and the COVID-19 pandemic has exacerbated pre-existing inequalities and widened gender gaps across various spheres. More than ever, building "forward" better requires acceleration of efforts that bring clear measurable results across all SDGs. Inclusivity needs to be at the heart of efforts to building back better and more equal and extra attention is also needed to avoid reproducing the gender inequalities that predated the pandemic.

This round table aims to discuss how governments and development partners can promote gender equality and women's empowerment as part of the COVID-19 recovery process, considering gender-differentiated impacts of the pandemic. Policy makers and experts from member States will present proven "accelerator" practices towards progress in specific SDG 5 targets that are contributing to meeting the 2030 deadline.

The illustrative "accelerator" practices will be presented during the round table, including examples of policy actions, measures and plans for COVID-19 recovery that are inclusive and gender-responsive and focused on social, economic and political empowerment.
